County Office of Education Independent Studies High School

Independent Studies

COE Independent Studies offers a supportive environment for self-directed learners who choose to complete High School credits on their own, under the guidance of a compassionate teacher. Students meet weekly with their teacher, to work on an individualized learning plan through independent study, which is intended to meet student needs, interests, and learning styles as well as school district curriculum and graduation requirements. Independent Studies is most helpful for students who have major responsibilities outside of school, such as working a full-time job, being a parent, or being a caregiver. Students who are easily distracted by social interactions in a classroom may find that they focus better on Independent Studies. Other students chose Independent Studies due to health and mental health challenges.
